

Convergent Systems Aids in Compliance with the National Defense Authorization Act

Value statement

The federal government has largely prohibited federal agencies and other organizations using federal funds from purchasing covered telecommunications equipment from companies such as Huawei, Hikvision, Hytera, ZTE, and Dahua. This includes equipment like camera systems used for public safety, which may qualify for grant funding to assist with replacements.

Convergent offers expertise in securing federal funding to enhance security, upgrade safety infrastructure, and implement compliant systems to sustain long-term security initiatives.

This assistance comprises:

- Comprehensive security assessments and threat analyses.
- Expert support in grant application preparation, including design validation.
- Professional assistance in drafting and refining grant proposals.
- Access to pre-established cooperative contract agreements.

Convergent is an industry leader in security integration (video, access control, visitor management, intrusion detection, gates). We can provide a no cost consultation on how to improve your electronic and physical security position.

- Check the FCC ID (found on the product label or in the user manual) on the FCC ID database link
- Visit the manufacturer website and look for its NDAA declaration of compliance
